GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT WINTERTHUR

Winterthur is a town of over 96'000 inhabitants and is in the region of Greater Zurich. It is the sixth-largest city in Switzerland and forms its own economic, cultural and political centre. It is an attractive little town, which offers great variety on a human scale and thus a great quality of life for its population. It has excellent traffic connections to the Swiss railway network, to the Zurich rapid-transit railway and to the airport. The excellent housing situation with large green areas is worthy of note. One-third of the surface of the municipality of Winterthur is built up, one-third is forest and one-third is put to agricultural use.

Winterthur enjoys a special reputation as a cultural city. This is particularly so because of its great art collections, the many different museums as well as the rich musical and theatrical life. The historical old part of town with many buildings worth seeing, squares and a generous pedestrian precinct is the daily meeting place for thousands of people. The town also plays an important role as an educational centre, especially with the new Winterthur campus of Zurich University (ZHAW) and the Technopark.

Winterthur has excellent connections by all means of transport:

✈ Zurich Airport is served by 120 direct trains daily or reached by car in a quarter of an hour. Practically all destinations in the world can be reached from this international hub.

— Approximately 150 express trains a day stop in Winterthur. There is an Intercity connection to all large Swiss towns every half hour.

Approximately 800 rapid-transit and regional trains operate from the nine Winterthur city stations daily. For example, the S12 takes you to the heart of Zurich city in only 19 minutes.

— Winterthur has four access/exit points on the A1 motorway connecting it to the Swiss national road network.

Travel time to:	By train	By car
